THE WRECK OF THE

"LARCHMONT"

NINETEEN SURVIVORS.

GHASTLY STORIES.

One of the saddest things in the mail papers is the account of the wreck of the steamer Larchmont on the New England coast, U.S., after a collision with a coal laden barque.

The exact number of victims will probably never be known, says Reuters Agency, but a moderate estimate places the dead at 150. Mrs. Henry Feldman, one of the two women survivors, says that, amid the cries of anguish and terror as the steamer sank, she heard some women sing the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers." The singers are thought to have been a party of ten Salvation Army workers, who were kneeling on the deck as the boat sank.

Forty-eight bodies from the wreck of the Larchmont were washed ashore, and it is believed that there have been about 100 other victims. The nineteen survivors are in a precarious condition. They are all severely frost-bitten as the result of their terrible experiences in the open boats with the temperature at zero. The spray continually dished over the little craft, freezing as it fell, and in almost every case the survivors, when lifted from the boats, were unable to use their limbs; their legs and arms hanging helplessly.

COFFINS OF ICE.

Captain Gray, of the Joy liner Kentucky, which was rushed to the scene of the disaster, reported last night that there are about five feet of water in the state-rooms on the Larchmont's hurricane deck, and that the seas are breaking over her. When returning to Block Island, Captain Gray remarked huge cakes of ice on the beach, and on drawing near he found that a number of bodies were encased in them. "It was," he says, "the most horrible sight I ever saw. There were thirty bodies strewn the beach, all of them encased in ice." In the bottoms of some of the boats he found twelve bodies, including those of several women who had been frozen to death while drifting. Captain Gray was unable to ascertain the names of the survivors owing to their precarious condition, and he mentions that the bodies will be left in the ice until they are handed over to the undertakers. During a moment of consciousness Purser Young told Captain Gray that there were either 75 or 105 passengers on board the Larchmont, but, owing to Young's almost inaudible voice, it was impossible to distinguish which of the numbers he meant.

TRIBUTE TO OFFICERS AND CREW.

Nearly all the surviving passengers agree in saying that both the crew and the officers of the Larchmont behaved well, and that Captain McVey, as soon as he realized the scope of the disaster, took prompt measures to rescue the passengers, giving preference to the women and children. The mob of panic-stricken passengers was, however, almost uncontrollable. Men and women fought each other on the deck for places in the boats and on the rafts. Many never reached the deck at all, but were suffocated below in their quarters or drowned between decks by the rushing waters.

Within ten minutes after the collision the boats got away from the ship's side, just as the vessel settled low in the water, with the waves dashing over her. The bitter cold and the high seas completed the work of destruction, and the little bands which got away were decimated by the same means.

THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

Oliver Janvier, a young man, twenty-one years of age, from Providence, said that he came ashore in a boat at seven o'clock on Tuesday morning with nine dead bodies as his companions. He waded ashore at Sandy Point with the water up to his waist, his boat with its grim cargo floating in on the rising tide.

"When the shock came," said Janvier, "I rushed on deck. There was a scene of great confusion, the passengers rushing wildly about. In contrast, however, to the panic-stricken passengers, the crew sprang to their quarters. Each man at the call of the officers went to his special lifeboat, and by main force kept back the passengers from springing overboard and swamping the boats and rafts as they were lowered."

Janvier rushed back to his state-room to get his clothes and to see what had become of his room mate, Henry Rock. Rock seemed stupefied, and when aroused, according to Janvier's story, attacked him. Janvier managed to drag Rock, struggling and protesting, into the passage way and there had to leave him.

A NIGHT OF HORROR.

Janvier sprang into a boat containing seven other men. As they pushed off they saw two men struggling in the water close to them. Janvier threw them a rope and hauled them on board. His companions at the oars had hardly begun their work again when they heard a woman's cry for help coming over the water. He called on his companions to save her, but so fast were they by their own perils and the endeavour to keep afloat in the tremendous seas that they refused. After a time they became becalmed and exhausted. The oars slipped from their hands, and the men dropped one after another to the bottom of the boat to die, while the spray and water splashed over the sides of the boat and covered them with a widening sheet of ice.

The boat load dwindled until Janvier was left with one other man, who gazed at him with a strange look in his half-frozen face. "This is awful," he said. "I can't keep this up much longer. I am going to end it all now." And drawing a razor from his pocket, he cut his throat, while Janvier sat powerless to prevent him.

THE SHANGHAI POLICE.

CORONER'S CRITICISMS.

The inquest on the body of Police Constable Robert John Morrow, killed while in the execution of his duty, was concluded at Shanghai on the 18th inst. at H.B.M.'s Police Court, before Mr. J. C. E. Douglas (Coroner).

The Coroner said that the verdict and finding in this case must be one of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown. He could not close this inquest without saying a word on behalf of the deceased and of the other members of the Municipal Police. He thought the occasion of the Police Constable Morrow's death, tackling as he did, unarmed and single-handed a crowd of armed roughs—the only white man that night on duty in the whole of the West Hongkong district—was a suitable occasion to call attention to the manner in which those responsible for the good order of this Settlement seemed to take their responsibilities in the matter of the proper policing of this Settlement. He wished to put on record his opinion that they did not seem to realise the magnitude of the present police problem here. During the whole of 1905 he had occasion, in this Court, frequently to call attention to what he considered the perfect uselessness of the Indian branch of the Police Force. At the ratepayers' meeting in 1906, when the question of the increase to the Indian branch of the force came up Mr. H. P. Wilkinson, the Crown Advocate, spoke in no unmeasured terms against that increase. His suggestions were opposed on the ground of expense to representatives of the community which pays just ten per cent rates and no other taxes whatsoever. Contrast that for a moment with 10 per cent rates in London, income-taxes and other taxes. It was suggested by Mr. Wilkinson that say 300 white men would be equally efficient as a thousand Indians in quelling a riot; if one arose, and they would be much more useful in ordinary times in the policing of the Settlement. The opinion was not adopted. During his (the Coroner's) absence in England, there was a riot (?) here in the Indian Police Force, and this community which had adopted the Indians as the supposed being a commercial community it was a good argument that it was cheap—was obliged to call in blue-jackets to assist in the policing of their own police and appeal to this Court to help them. He only wished to call attention to this because he thought they did not understand what now was to be done for the proper policing of the settlement. Only to-day he had read in a paper which he supposed represented in some measure the feeling of this community a flabby article that seemed to suggest that the present state of things would be alleviated by the advent of 25 more Indians; and that matters would be put straight instead of being made worse. If the settlement had doubled itself within the last five years and no attempt had been made to provide any adequate police force to meet the increased difficulties. He said deliberately, the Police Force was starved—starved in men, starved in money, starved in the native detective department. The Municipal Council appeared to expect to get competent native detectives at salaries beginning at $15 a month, and to get honesty as well. Even all the Police Force was starved in proper management, in its proper divisional departments, the provision of properly competent commissioned officers who understood their work; and moreover, understood how to gain the position of the confidence of the men, and who made them feel that whilst having a more difficult police problem to deal with than any city in the world, they were still able to have efficiency, being fully equipped for that purpose, and able to satisfy the demands of the community. That was not the feeling of the present Police Force in the (Coroner's) had had every opportunity of knowing.

CHINA SUGAR REFINING CO., LIMITED.

The report for presentation to the shareholders at the twenty-ninth annual general meeting, to be held at the offices of the general agents, at 11.15 a.m., on Wednesday, 17th inst. reads—

The general agents beg to submit to shareholders their report on the Company's business for the year 1906, with a statement of accounts to 31st December last.

For the greater part of the year supplies of sugar were poured on to the various markets from Java and Japan largely in excess of requirements, competition was keen, and prices gradually declined. Work at the refineries had to be reduced, and during the last six months the output reached a very low point.

Inclusive of $40,419.68 brought forward from the year 1905 the sum at credit of profit and loss account is $109,218.47 which the general agents and consulting committee recommend should be appropriated as follows, viz.—

SHANGHAI.

DICK DAILY SHOT.

About 10 a.m. to-day, reports Shanghai Mercury

of 15th inst. what might have been a serious shooting affray took place at the Hotel

Metropole. At the time mentioned the boarders in the Hotel were startled by hearing four or five shots fired in quick succession, the sounds coming apparently from the first floor. A rush was made upstairs and a man was discovered that Mrs. R. Daly, who some time past has been separated from her husband—well-known as

Dick Daly, of the Out of Grill Room—had fired four or five shots at her husband who was occupying Room No. 29. After firing the shots, one of which took effect

in Daly's left leg, inflicting a slight wound,

Mrs. Daly made good her escape and was last seen going along the Nanjing Road in a rickshaw. Daly had his leg dressed and then announced his intention of proceeding to the American Consulate-General to lay a complaint. In the meantime, Sina Police station was informed of what had taken place and

Detective Sergeant Brown and a Constable lost

no time in proceeding to the scene of the shooting, and found the hotel in a state of excitement. A search of the room disclosed three bullet holes in the door and one in the wall close to the door. All the holes evidently having been made with either a thirty-two or thirty-eight calibre bullet. Prior to the shooting, Daly was in his room and he had opened the door and entered, locking the door behind him. She then signified her intention of "going for him" or "went" words to this effect, and she lost no time in opening fire with the result stated. The woman was seen on arriving 15th inst. at her house at No. 12, South Road,

and was taken in custody by Detective Brown and Craig and she is now being held under surveillance. From inquiries it was found that the woman was at the hotel until 10 p.m. on 15th inst. waiting for Daly to return, on 16th inst. he did not return, and she was seen on 17th inst.

at her house, where she was seen by the police.

LUNN SUGAR REFINING COMPANY LIMITED.

The general agents beg to submit to shareholders their report on the company's business for the year 1906, with a statement of accounts to 31st December last.

For the greater part of the year the refinery at Malacca was kept working, but at a reduced rate, and owing to the low prices ruling everywhere the margin of profit on working was small.

After allowing for interest and loss in exchange the sum at debit of profit and loss account is $138,523.01.

This consists of Messrs. A. G. Wood and H. P. White, who offer themselves for re-election.
